Chinmaya Aradhana Day at CVV

Chinmaya Aradhana Day is observed on 3rd August every year to mark the Mahasamadhi Day of Pujya Gurudev Swami Chinmayananda, the founder of the Chinmaya Mission. This solemn and sacred day is dedicated to paying tribute to the timeless vision and teachings of Gurudev, whose life was an offering to spread the wisdom of the Bhagavad Gita, Upanishads, and Vedanta.

At CVV, Aradhana Day holds special significance as the University itself is a living expression of Gurudev's vision to integrate Indian Knowledge Systems with modern education. All facilities and departments of CVV join together in devotion and remembrance on this day.

Students, staff and faculty actively participated in Gurudev's ashtottara archana and paduka puja. Chinmaya Aradhana Day at CVV is not merely a remembrance; it is a rededication to Gurudev's mission, where every facility and resource of the University is aligned to nurture values, wisdom, and service in the light of Vedanta.

The celebrations across all campuses echoed the values of patriotism, unity, and service, inspiring students to uphold the vision and mission of CVV in contributing to the nation's progress.

CELEBRATION OF KARGIL VIJAY DIWAS

To honour the brave hearts of the 1999 Kargil War and express deep gratitude for their unmatched dedication to the nation, the Chinmaya Yuva Kendra (CHYK) of CVV organised a heartfelt commemorative event on the occasion of Kargil Vijay Diwas on 2 August 2025. The programme radiated patriotism, reverence, and a sense of national pride throughout.

The event began with a soulful prayer rendered by Adarsh and Ashwin, invoking peace and gratitude. This was followed by a gracious welcome address by Rohana and Rajeswari, who warmly greeted the guests and participants, setting the tone for the proceedings.

To awaken and strengthen the spirit of patriotism, a dramatic dialogue between soldiers was presented by the students. This emotionally charged performance captured the raw reality of life on the battlefield, bringing to light the courage, struggles, and ultimate sacrifices made by Indian soldiers. It offered a vivid picturization of the noble spirit in which they laid down their lives for the country.

The audience was then privileged to hear the presidential address delivered by the Chief Guest, Retd. Honorary Subedar Major Nirmala Babu. His speech was both informative and inspiring, offering a comprehensive overview of the Kargil War of 1999 — its strategic complexities, the heroism displayed by Indian soldiers, and the enduring legacy of their victory.

In his address, he also recognised and honoured the contributions of the ex-servicemen currently serving at CVV, highlighting how their spirit of service continues to inspire even beyond the battlefield. In particular, he made a special mention of Honorary Captain V. Ravindran, appreciating his exemplary service and commitment to the nation. Alongside him, all other military veterans working within the university were acknowledged and celebrated for their steadfast dedication and continued role in shaping the institution's values.

To further enrich the audience's understanding, Master Warrant Officer Deepankuran Sir was invited to shed light on the Indian Navy's contributions during the Kargil conflict. His account added a crucial perspective on the coordinated efforts of all three branches of the Indian Armed Forces, enhancing appreciation for their unified role in securing the nation's borders.

In a deeply respectful and symbolic gesture, CHYK members felicitated all the servicemen present by presenting them with the Indian National Flag, a token of the nation's gratitude and admiration for their selfless service.

To uplift the spirit of the audience and celebrate the strength of national unity, a patriotic dance performance was presented by the CHYK team. Through expressive storytelling and vibrant choreography, the dance beautifully depicted the emotions and triumphs surrounding the Kargil War, leaving a lasting impact on all present.

The event concluded with a sincere vote of thanks by Yuva Veer Pradhyumma, who expressed heartfelt appreciation to all dignitaries, faculty, guests, and students for their presence and participation. The event closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Kadamakudi
Green Trail by the Jeevanam Club

A nature walk titled 'Kadamakudi Green Trail' was organised by the Jeevanam Club on 2nd August 2025. It provided the students with an immersive experience amidst the tranquil backwaters and rich biodiversity of Kadamakudi.

Led by a knowledgeable local eco-guide, the walk provided valuable insights into the region's unique flora, fauna, and ecological significance. Students explored the scenic landscapes, engaged in thoughtful environmental conversations, and gained a deeper appreciation for wetland ecosystems.

The initiative aimed to foster environmental awareness, promote sustainable thinking, and encourage students to reconnect with nature beyond the confines of the classroom. The event was well-received and marked a refreshing start to the club's activities for the academic year.

Leader's Lounge Series – Fourth Edition 2025

On 2 August 2025, CVV hosted a compelling edition of its Leaders' Lounge Series, featuring Prof. Anantanand Rambachan, a globally respected Professor of Religion at Saint Olaf College, Minnesota, USA. Organised in collaboration with the Institution's Innovation Council (IIC) and the Innovation and Entrepreneurship Development Centre (IEDC), the session offered students a rare opportunity to engage with profound ideas on work, well-being, and spiritual responsibility through a philosophical and ethical lens.

Held in a hybrid format, the event took place at CVV's CEG campus with Prof. Rambachan joining virtually from the United States. The gathering began with a soulful prayer led by Aadarsh P Hareesh and his team, setting a serene and reflective tone. This was followed by a warm welcome from Prof. Dr. Ajay Kapoor, Vice Chancellor of CVV and an introductory address by Prof. Dr. Sunitha Grandhee, Dean of Student Affairs.

Prof. Rambachan's keynote address was the intellectual centrepiece of the session. Though the title of the talk was not formally stated, the themes he explored resonated deeply with the audience, particularly students seeking direction and purpose in an increasingly complex world. Drawing from the Bhagavad Gita—specifically the third chapter—Prof. Rambachan spoke about the significance of swabhava (one's intrinsic nature) and swadharma (one's personal duty), emphasising that meaningful work arises when one remains faithful to their nature.

He argued that work is not merely an economic necessity, but a vital source of human well-being. Quoting the idea that 'your work is going to fill a large part of your life,' he urged students to pursue what they believe is great work—work that aligns with both their passion and inner values. According to him, the only way to do great work is to love what you do, and the only way to love what you do is to remain rooted in your swabhava. He emphasised that by honouring our true nature, we naturally fulfil our swadharma, thus contributing meaningfully to society while also attaining personal fulfilment.

Another powerful aspect of his talk revolved around the cosmic interdependence of life—a theme central to the Gita. Prof. Rambachan highlighted how every action exists within a vast network of mutual nourishment and responsibility. Recognising this interconnection, he noted, can help individuals approach their responsibilities with greater reverence, humility, and intention.

The event subtly echoed global themes as well, with the promotional materials featuring the 'Sustainable Development Goals' logo, particularly Goal 17: Partnerships for the Goals. This suggested an underlying emphasis on collaboration, ethics, and the role of spiritual frameworks in addressing shared human challenges.

The session concluded with a vote of thanks by Ms. Anupama Jims, Assistant Dean for External Affairs & Internationalisation, followed by a closing remark from student representative Niranjana Gireesh (BScBEd Mathematics). Their expressions of gratitude reflected the impact of the session, which left students with a broader understanding of work not just as a career, but as a calling rooted in clarity, ethics, and self-awareness.

In an age where the purpose of education is often narrowly viewed through technical skillsets and job readiness, this session stood out as a reminder of the deeper dimensions of leadership. Prof. Rambachan's insights helped participants reflect not just on what they wish to become, but who they already are—and how being true to that self can be the most powerful form of leadership in the world today.

A DREAM IN BLOOM

A Wednesday in November dawned bright and clear
Writhing in pain, I knew her arrival was near...
Gently, on my chest she was placed
Swaddled in a cotton cloth, finely laced!

God's tiny bundle of joy, full of innocence lay,
To melt every heart, she'd meet all her way.
Cry did she, soft as a whisper:
Life's first breath, my soul's first shiver.

Fingers curled like petals tight,
Eyes adjusting to morning light.
Months rolled on like lullabies,
With midnight feeds and sleepy sighs.

Tiny hands reached for my face,
Each coo and giggle — a sweet embrace.
First steps wobbled across the floor,
Crayon filled walls on every wall and door!

Then came the days of braided hair,
Backpacks packed with love and care.
Schoolyard friends and skinned-up knees,
Years swept past, akin to a breeze!

From fragile wails to fearless grace,
She's danced through life with her own pace.
I've watched her grow, I've held her tight,
I've whispered prayers, I've passed sleepless nights...

And lo! Here she is!
Chasing a mighty world,
Writing her story, bold and free,
Yet, carrying pieces sewn from me.
A young woman grown, a soul that she's!
The only gift I bestow on her
are prayers more than one can hear.

God bless you, My Sweet Angel!
